

Legal Expression in House Documents in the Ptolemy Period, Demotic Documents

Omayma Hasanein

The Ptolemaic Period is distinguished by the writing of many legal documents such as purchase, rent, mortgage, and inheritance contracts. In addition to, a big collection of legal documents of disputes and agreement cases. The existence of a large number of these documents helped in enriching the scientific material of this research, where mentioned nearly forty papyris preserved in several different museums.

The research has mentioned many legal expressions existing in these documents, such as nouns, verbs, prepositions, which changed the usual linguistic meaning used in other documents.

The research mentioned also the purchase procedures and conditions, such as the payment process, specifying the real estate and the final contract process, which proves the second party's right in this legal process.